

Proposition

Idling vehicles release harmful pollutants into the air, which can worsen asthma and lung disease.

Opposition

Enforcing a ban on idling may be unrealistic, especially in winter or for parents waiting to pick up children.

Proposition

Banning idling will save money by reducing fuel consumption.

Opposition

Drivers should be allowed to idle, if necessary, particularly when idling for safety or comfort (e.g. heating or air conditioning).

Proposition

Creating no-idling zones outside schools will protect children and young people's health.

Opposition

Strict idling bans may be difficult to enforce.

Proposition

Opposition

Proposition

Opposition